AND THE DIGGING GOES ON

The excavating of the campus which began the first of the year is the second phase of a three stage utility construction project. Completed last summer, the first phase upgraded the campus sewage and storm drain system.

The present construction includes a two million dollar installation of new steam and chilled water system; upgrading of sanitary and storm drain system; improving of electrical and telephone services, which will include a new centrex system around July 1.

According to Paul Flood, the project's architect, the unique feature of the plan is a 72-inch wide steam tunnel network, which will serve as a trunk system for the heating and air conditioning water supply. The advantage of this system is its accessibility for routine inspection and repairs, giving it an indefinite life expectancy.

Phase two, which is to be completed by July 21, will be followed by the installation of new utilities and a maintenance building in conjunction with the construction of the permanent MSSD facilities.
